Privacy Bill
Government Bill

Explanatory note

General policy statement
The Privacy Bill (the Bill) repeals and replaces the Privacy Act 1993 (the Act), as recommended by Law Commission’s 2011 review of the Act.

The Act has been in operation for 25 years. Over that time, the rise of the Internet and the digital economy has transformed business and government, and the use of personal information. New technologies such as social media platforms, e-commerce, Internet-connected devices, and cloud storage have changed the way personal information is used.

Large quantities of data are readily stored, retrieved, and disclosed and can be easily sent around the world. This creates many benefits, but also new challenges for the protection of personal information. The Law Commission has called for the Act to be updated and modernised to reflect these changes.

Like the Act, the Bill regulates the collection, use, and disclosure of information about individuals. The Bill retains the Act’s 12 information privacy principles, which seek to protect people’s privacy, while also accommodating legitimate information use by government, firms, and other organisations. Information privacy principles 6 and 7, for example, continue to provide, respectively, for a person’s right to access and correct information about them. The Bill also updates the information privacy principles in some respects, for example, to better protect personal information sent overseas.

The Bill retains the Act’s complaints system. If a person thinks his or her privacy has been breached resulting in harm, he or she can complain to the Privacy Commissioner. The Privacy Commissioner will then attempt to resolve the dispute. If it is not resolved, the person may take the complaint to the Human Rights Review Tribunal and may seek compensation.
The Bill introduces additional ways, however, to enforce the information privacy principles. For example, the Privacy Commissioner will be able to make binding decisions on complaints about access to information and issue compliance notices. The Bill also requires agencies (the name used for any entity handling personal information) to notify the Privacy Commissioner and affected individuals of any unauthorised access to or disclosure of personal information where that poses a risk of harm.

Purpose of the reforms

The key purpose of reforming the Act is to promote people’s confidence that their personal information is secure and will be treated properly. The Bill achieves this purpose through reforms that will help address privacy risks earlier and give the Privacy Commissioner a stronger role. Public confidence in the way personal information is used and handled will, in turn, support the innovative and effective use of personal information by public and private sector agencies.

Changes made in the Bill

The Bill implements most of the Law Commission’s recommendations, and some recommendations from the Privacy Commissioner’s Necessary and Desirable reports. The key changes are listed below—

- mandatory reporting of privacy breaches: privacy breaches (unauthorised or accidental access to, or disclosure of, personal information) that pose a risk of harm to people must be notified to the Privacy Commissioner and to affected individuals;

- compliance notices: the Commissioner will be able to issue compliance notices that require an agency to do something, or stop doing something, in order to comply with privacy law. The Human Rights Review Tribunal will be able to enforce compliance notices and hear appeals;

- strengthening cross-border data flow protections: New Zealand agencies will be required to take reasonable steps to ensure that personal information disclosed overseas will be subject to acceptable privacy standards. The Bill also clarifies the application of our law when a New Zealand agency engages an overseas service provider;

- new criminal offences: it will be an offence to mislead an agency in a way that affects someone else’s information and to knowingly destroy documents containing personal information where a request has been made for it. The penalty is a fine not exceeding $10,000;

- Commissioner making binding decisions on access requests: this reform will enable the Commissioner to make decisions on complaints relating to access to information, rather than the Human Rights Review Tribunal. The Commissioner’s decisions will be able to be appealed to the Tribunal;

- strengthening the Privacy Commissioner’s information gathering power: the Commissioner’s existing investigation power is strengthened by allowing him or her to shorten the time frame within which an agency must comply, and increasing the penalty for non-compliance.

The changes will better align New Zealand’s privacy law with international developments, such as the 2013 OECD Privacy Guidelines and the European Union’s forthcoming General Data Protection Regulation.

The Bill modernises and updates the language used in the Act to make the Bill easier to navigate and read. It also makes minor and technical changes. For example, it addresses 2 problems that have emerged with Approved Information Sharing Agreements (AISAs), namely making it easier for an AISA to apply to a class of agencies, and allowing specified Crown agents to lead an AISA’s development.

The Bill updates authorisations for sharing listed law enforcement information, including some court information. It clarifies the relationship between privacy legislation and the Senior Courts Act 2016 and the District Court Act 2016. It also re-establishes the ability to amend authorisations by Order in Council, where the proposed change does not involve sharing court information. The Bill preserves existing Information Matching Agreements but, in the future, information matching programmes will be able to be authorised using AISAs.

Departmental disclosure statement

The Ministry of Justice is required to prepare a disclosure statement to assist with the scrutiny of this Bill. The disclosure statement provides access to information about the policy development of the Bill and identifies any significant or unusual legislative features of the Bill.

Regulatory impact assessment

The Ministry of Justice produced regulatory impact assessments in March 2012 and August 2014 to help inform the main policy decisions taken by the Government relating to the contents of this Bill.

Copies of these regulatory impact assessments can be found at—

Clause by clause analysis

Clause 1 states the Bill’s Title.

Clause 2 is the commencement clause and states that the Bill comes into force on 1 July 2019. As the Bill is intended to come into force 6 months after enactment, this date may need to be updated during the legislative passage of the Bill.
Part 1

Preliminary provisions

Subpart 1—Preliminary matters

Clause 3 states the purpose of the Bill.

Clause 4 gives effect to the transitional, savings, and related provisions in Schedule 1.

Clause 5 states that the Bill binds the Crown.

Subpart 2—Interpretation and related matters

Clause 6 defines terms used in the Bill. Key terms include agency, information privacy principle (IPP), personal information, and public register privacy principle (PRPP). Terms used in the Bill have substantially the same definitions as in the Privacy Act 1993, which this Bill replaces. However, 3 notable changes are—

- the definition of collect is amended to clarify that, in relation to personal information, collect requires taking a step to seek or obtain the personal information, and so would include attempting to obtain information:
- the definition of publicly available publication is amended to clarify that it includes an electronic publication, that a publication can be publicly available even if a fee is charged for access, and that a publicly available publication includes a register maintained under an enactment to the extent that that register may be accessed by members of the public:
- the definition of unique identifier is replaced to clarify that, in relation to an individual, it means an identifier other than the individual’s name that uniquely identifies the individual.

Clause 7 re-enacts section 3(1) to (3) of the Privacy Act 1993 and sets out the circumstances in which information is to be treated as being held by an agency.

Clause 8 re-enacts section 3(4) of the Privacy Act 1993, but clarifies that when personal information held by an agency is treated as being held by another agency, it does not matter that the holder agency is outside New Zealand or holds the information outside New Zealand.

Clause 9 re-enacts section 4 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that agencies are responsible for the actions of, or information disclosed to, their employees.

Part 2

Privacy Commissioner

Subpart 1—Appointment of Privacy Commissioner

Clause 10 continues the office of the Privacy Commissioner. As provided in section 12 of the Privacy Act 1993, the Commissioner is a corporation sole and a Crown entity for the purposes of the Crown Entities Act 2004.
Clause 11 re-enacts section 15 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides for the appointment of a Deputy Privacy Commissioner.

Clause 12 re-enacts section 19 of the Privacy Act 1993 and prohibits the Commissioner from holding other offices.

Clause 13 re-enacts clause 4 of Schedule 1 of the Privacy Act 1993 and relates to superannuation and retiring allowances for the Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner.

Subpart 2—Functions of Privacy Commissioner

Clause 14 re-enacts section 13(1) and (2) of the Privacy Act 1993 and sets out in a more consolidated format the Commissioner’s functions. There is no change to the Commissioner’s functions, except that the Commissioner will no longer be required to publish directories of personal information (as section 21 of the Privacy Act 1993 is not carried over into the Bill).

Clause 15 re-enacts section 26(1) of the Privacy Act 1993 and requires the Commissioner to monitor the operation of the Privacy Act and provide a report to the responsible Minister.

Clause 16 re-enacts section 26(2) of the Privacy Act 1993 and requires that a copy of any report received by the responsible Minister under clause 15 be presented to the House of Representatives.

Clause 17 re-enacts section 13(1A) of the Privacy Act 1993 and requires the Commissioner to act independently.

Clause 18 re-enacts section 14 of the Privacy Act 1993 and sets out the matters that the Commissioner must have regard to, or take account of, when performing his or her functions, or exercising his or her powers.

Part 3

Information privacy principles, public register privacy principles, and codes of practice

Subpart 1—Information privacy principles

Clause 19 re-enacts the 12 information privacy principles (IPPs) set out in section 6 of the Privacy Act 1993 with the following changes:

- IPP 2 has an additional exception that enables an agency to collect personal information from a source other than the individual concerned if the agency believes, on reasonable grounds, that it is necessary to collect the information from that source to prevent or lessen a serious threat to the life or health of any individual:

- IPP 3 no longer has the existing exception that permits an agency to collect personal information from the individual concerned without ensuring the individual is aware of specified matters if the collection is authorised by the indi-
• IPP 4 now requires an agency to have particular regard to the age of the individual concerned to ensure the means by which personal information is collected is fair and does not intrude to an unreasonable extent upon the affairs of that individual:
• IPP 7 is changed with the procedural provisions of existing IPP 7(3) and (5)
  being moved to Part 4:
  • IPP 11 is changed in 2 respects. First, there is a new subclause (2), clarifying that an agency may rely on the exception in IPP 11(1)(e)(i) (the maintenance of the law exception) to report any reasonably held belief that an offence has been, or may be, committed. Secondly, a more substantive change is made by the inclusion of new subclauses (3) to (6). These new provisions impose additional obligations on agencies when disclosing personal information to an overseas person to ensure the protection of that information. Disclosure to an overseas person will generally only be permissible if—
    • the individual concerned consents to the disclosure of his or her information to the overseas person; or
    • the overseas person is in a country that is prescribed in regulations as having privacy laws comparable to New Zealand; or
    • the agency believes that the overseas person is required to protect the information in a way that, overall, is comparable to the protections afforded by our New Zealand legislation.
• IPP 12 is amended to clarify that an agency that simply records a unique iden-tifier assigned by another agency in order to contact that other agency and enable that other agency to locate its records is not assigning the unique identifier for use in its own operations. IPP 12 is also amended to include another exception that permits agencies to use unique identifiers for statistical and research purposes. The third amendment to IPP 12 is to require that, before disclosing a unique identifier, an agency must take all reasonable steps to minimise the risk of misuse of that identifier.

Clause 20 re-enacts section 10 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides, for the purposes of IPP 5 and IPPs 8 to 11, that personal information held by an agency includes information held by that agency outside New Zealand if that information has been transferred out of New Zealand. For the purposes of IPPs 6 and 7 all personal information held outside New Zealand is covered, whether or not it was transferred outside New Zealand.

Clause 21 re-enacts section 60(1) of the Privacy Act 1993 and requires that an agency administering a public register must comply, so far as is reasonably practicable with the IPPs.

Clause 22 re-enacts section 7 of the Privacy Act 1993, expressing more simply the relationship between the IPPs and other law.
Clause 23 re-enacts section 8(1) and (5) of the Privacy Act 1993, providing that IPPs 1 to 4 apply only to personal information collected after 2 July 1993, and that IPP 12(1) to (4) applies only to the assignment of unique identifiers after 2 July 1993. It also clarifies that an agency cannot, after that date, assign to an individual a unique identifier previously assigned to that individual, whether the previous assignment was before or after 2 July 1993.

Clause 24 re-enacts section 56 of the Privacy Act 1993 and exempts from the application of certain IPPs personal information relating to personal or domestic affairs. However, 2 changes are made. The exemption does not apply if the information is being or has been collected by an unlawful means, or by engaging in misleading or deceptive conduct. It also does not apply if the collection, use, or disclosure of the information would be highly offensive to a reasonable person.

Clause 25 re-enacts section 57 of the Privacy Act 1993 and carries over the existing exemption for the intelligence and security agencies.

Clause 26 re-enacts and consolidates sections 7(5) and 55 of the Privacy Act 1993, which exempt the application of the access and correction principles from 6 classes of information, including information collected by Statistics New Zealand under the Statistics Act 1975.

Clause 27 re-enacts section 54 of the Privacy Act 1993, which empowers the Commissioner to authorise the collection, use, or disclosure of personal information which would otherwise breach IPP 2, 10, or 11. The scope of this provision is, however, extended to empower the Commissioner to also authorise the keeping of personal information in breach of IPP 9. The application procedure for an authorisation is set out, and requires the applicant to give notice of the application to all individuals concerned and to provide those individuals sufficient opportunity to object. A list of current authorisations granted under this provision must be kept on the Commissioner’s Internet site.

Clause 28 re-enacts section 11 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that if a public sector agency holds personal information, the individual concerned has a legal right to access that information under IPP 6, and that right may be enforced by a court order. The IPPs do not otherwise confer any legal rights enforceable in a court.

Subpart 2—Public register privacy principles

Clauses 29 to 34 re-enact, with technical changes only, sections 58, 59, 60, 62, and 65 of the Privacy Act 1993 relating to public register privacy principles.

Subpart 3—Codes of practice

Clauses 35 to 43 re-enact sections 46 to 53 and 63 to 64 of the Privacy Act 1993, relating to the issue of codes of practice, with the following changes:

- a code of practice cannot now be issued containing all of the IPPs without any modification:
• providing for the issue of sector-specific codes of practice applying 1 or more of the IPPs to information about deceased persons:
• requiring the Commissioner to ensure that a code of practice is publicly available on an Internet site:
• clarify that the failure to comply with a code of practice issued in relation to public registers modifying the application of 1 or more IPP is to be treated as breaching an IPP.

Part 4
Access to and correction of personal information

Part 4 re-enacts Parts 4 and 5 of the Privacy Act 1993, re-organising the provisions into a more logical and accessible structure that is divided into 3 subparts.

Subpart 1—Access to personal information

Clause 44 defines access request and requestor. An access request is a request made under IPP 6(1)(a) (request for confirmation whether an agency holds personal information about the requestor) or IPP 6(1)(b) (request for access to the requestor’s personal information), or both.

Clause 45 re-enacts section 34 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that only individuals (natural persons) may make an access request.

Clause 46 re-enacts section 37 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that a requestor can ask that his or her access request be treated as urgent, giving the reason for the urgency. The obligation of an agency on receipt of an urgent request is clarified. The agency must consider the request, and the reason for the request, when determining the priority to be given to responding to it.

Clause 47 re-enacts section 38 of the Privacy Act 1993 and requires an agency to give reasonable assistance to an individual who wishes to make an access request, or who is making an access request.

Clause 48 re-enacts section 39 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides for the transfer of access requests. However, an agency is not now be required to transfer a request if the agency has good cause to believe that the requestor does not want his or her request transferred. If an agency, does not transfer a request in reliance on this belief the agency must, within 10 working days, inform the requestor and supply the name of the agency to which the request could be transferred.

Clause 49 sets out the procedure that an agency must follow on receipt of a request made under IPP 6(1)(a). There is no change to the current procedural requirements, which are now consolidated in this clause.

Clause 50 sets out the procedure that an agency must follow on receipt of a request made under IPP 6(1)(b). There is no change to the current procedural requirements, which are now consolidated in this clause.
Clause 51 re-enacts section 41 of the Privacy Act 1993 and enables an agency to extend the time limit for transferring or deciding whether to grant an access request. The circumstances for extending a time limit now also include if the processing of the request raises complex issues.

Clause 52 groups together the reasons that an agency may give for refusing an access request made under IPP 6(1)(b) that are related to the safety of the requestor. In addition to the existing reasons in sections 27(1)(d) and 29(1)(c), (d), (e) and (4) of the Privacy Act 1993, 2 further reasons are included for refusing access to information requested—

- the disclosure of the information would create a significant likelihood of serious harassment of an individual;
- the disclosure of the information would involve the disclosure of information about another individual who is the victim of an offence or alleged offence and would cause that person significant distress, loss of dignity, or injury to feelings.

In any case where an agency is proposing to refuse an access request because disclosure of the information would be likely to prejudice the physical or mental health of the requestor, the agency may consult with the requestor’s health practitioner (and is not limited to consulting with the requestor’s medical practitioner as currently).

Clause 53 re-enacts section 29(1)(b) and (3) of the Privacy Act 1993 and sets out when an agency may refuse an access request made under IPP 6(1)(b) if the information requested is evaluative material. An agency may now also refuse to disclose evaluative material if that material was made available to the agency by another agency and that other agency has grounds for refusing to disclose the material. It is also clarified that evaluative or opinion material provided by a person within the agency as part of his or her job is not evaluative material for the purposes of this provision.

Clause 54 re-enacts section 27 of the Privacy Act 1993 and sets out when an agency may refuse an access request made under IPP 6(1)(b) for reasons related to the security and defence of New Zealand or prejudice to international relations.

Clause 55 re-enacts section 28 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that an agency may refuse an access request made under IPP 6(1)(b) if making the information available would disclose a trade secret.

Clause 56 re-enacts section 29(2) of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that an agency may refuse an access request made under IPP 6(1)(b) if the information requested is not readily available, doesn’t exist, cannot be found, or is not held by the agency.

Clause 57 groups together all the other reasons that an agency may give for refusing an access request made under IPP 6(1)(b). In addition to the existing grounds in sections 27(1)(c), 29(1)(a) and (f) to (j) of the Privacy Act 1993, an agency may also refuse an access request if the agency has reasonable grounds for believing that the request was made under duress.
Clause 58 expressly provides that instead of refusing an access request made under IPP 6(1)(b), an agency may grant access but impose conditions relating to the requestor’s use of the information or the requestor’s disclosure of the information, or both.

Clause 59 re-enacts section 44 of the Privacy Act 1993 and specifies the matters a requestor must be informed of if an agency responds to an access request made under IPP 6(1)(a) or (b) by neither confirming nor denying that it holds information about the requestor.

Clause 60 re-enacts section 44 of the Privacy Act 1993 and specifies the matters a requestor must be informed of if an agency refuses an access request made under IPP 6(1)(b). If the reason for refusing the request is that the information is evaluative material, the grounds in support of that reason must be disclosed to the requestor automatically, unless the giving of those grounds would be prejudicial to the interest protected.

Clause 61 re-enacts section 43 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that if there is good reason for withholding some of the information in a document, the other information in that document may be made available by releasing a copy of the document with deletions and alterations. In relation to the information that is withheld, the agency has the same obligations as specified in clause 60.

Clause 62 re-enacts section 42 of the Privacy Act 1993 and sets out the ways information may be made available to a requestor. An agency must make the information available in the way preferred by the requestor unless to do so would impair administrative efficiency or be contrary to a legal duty.

Clause 63 re-enacts section 45 of the Privacy Act 1993 and sets out the responsibilities of an agency before giving access to information.

Subpart 2—Correction of personal information

Clause 64 defines correction request and requestor. A correction request is a request made under IPP 7(1)(a) (request to correct information) or IPP 7(2)(b) (request that a statement of correction be attached to the information).

Clause 65 re-enacts section 34 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that only individuals (natural persons) may make correction requests.

Clause 66 re-enacts section 37 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that a requestor can ask that his or her request be treated as urgent, giving the reason for the urgency. The obligation of an agency on receipt of an urgent request is clarified. The agency must consider the request, and reason for the request, when determining the priority to be given to responding to it.

Clause 67 re-enacts section 38 of the Privacy Act 1993 and requires an agency to give reasonable assistance to an individual who wishes to make a correction request, or who is making a correction request.

Clause 68 re-enacts section 39 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides for the transfer of a correction request.
Clause 69 sets out the procedure that an agency must follow on receipt of a request made under IPP 7(1)(a). The matters that must be notified to a requestor are specified. If a request is not granted, the requestor must be informed of the reason, that he or she may provide a statement of correction with a request under IPP 7(2)(b), and of his or her right to make a complaint to the Commissioner.

Clause 70 sets out the procedure that an agency must follow on receipt of a request made under IPP 7(2)(b). If an agency takes no steps to attach a statement of correction as requested, the agency must inform the requestor.

Clause 71 re-enacts section 41 of the Privacy Act 1993 and enables an agency to extend the time limit for transferring or deciding whether to grant a correction required.

Subpart 3—Charges

Clause 72 re-enacts sections 35(1) to (5) and 40(2) of the Privacy Act 1993 and more clearly sets out the charges that may be imposed by a public sector agency (if authorised by the Commissioner) and a private sector agency. A public sector agency may not now be authorised by the Commissioner to charge for correcting information in accordance with a request made under IPP 7(1)(a).

Clause 73 re-enacts section 73 of the Privacy Act 1993, which provides for the Commissioner to authorise a public sector agency to impose a charge for granting an access request and for attaching a statement of correction to personal information.

Part 5

Complaints, investigations, and proceedings

Part 5 re-enacts Parts 8 and 9 of the Privacy Act 1993 and sets out the procedures for making, investigating, and resolving complaints, or investigating and resolving matters that the Commissioner considers are an interference with the privacy of an individual.

New Part 5 essentially carries over the existing procedures but more clearly identifies the types of complaints that may be made and the resolution pathway for each type of complaint. However, there are 2 substantive changes—

- if the Commissioner determines that a complaint about an agency refusing to make personal information available has substance, the Commissioner may direct the agency to make the information available. The complaint need not be referred to the Human Rights Review Tribunal as at present, although an agency may appeal to the Tribunal against the Commissioner’s direction;

- the Commissioner may now impose a time limit for a person to provide information, documents, or things within that person’s possession or control that the Commissioner considers may be relevant to an investigation. If no time limit is imposed by the Commissioner, the current default period of 20 working days applies. Any extension of the time limit is now at the discretion of the Commissioner.
Clause 74 defines terms used in new Part 5, including aggrieved individual and complainant.

Clause 75 re-enacts section 66 of the Privacy Act 1993 and sets out the circumstances in which an action is an interference with the privacy of an individual. These circumstances now include a refusal of a request that a statement of correction be attached to personal information, a failure to meet time limits in relation to correction requests, and undue delay in correcting information after granting a request. The term interference with the privacy of an individual is key to Part 5.

Subpart 1—Complaints

Clause 76 specifies the 2 types of complaint that may be made—

- a complaint alleging that an action of an agency is, or appears to be, an interference with the privacy of an individual:
- a public register complaint.

Clause 77 re-enacts section 67(1) of the Privacy Act 1993 and expressly provides that a complaint may be made by an aggrieved individual. A complaint may now also be bought by a representative of 1 or more aggrieved individuals.

Clause 78 re-enacts sections 67(2) and 68 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that a complaint must be made to the Commissioner, and may be made orally or in writing. An oral complaint must be put in writing as soon as practicable.

Clause 79 re-enacts sections 70, 71(3), 72(3), 72A(3), 72B(3) and 72C(3) of the Privacy Act 1993. These provisions are drawn together to set out the 6 options available to the Commissioner on receiving a complaint.

Clause 80 re-enacts section 71(1) of the Privacy Act 1993 and sets out the circumstances in which the Commissioner may decide not to investigate a complaint. These circumstances are expanded to include—

- the complainant has not made reasonable efforts to resolve the complaint with the agency concerned:
- there is an alternative dispute resolution process available to the complainant:
- the complainant knew about the action that is the subject of the complaint for 12 months or more before making the complaint.

Clause 81 provides that the Commissioner may decide to defer taking action on the complaint if—

- the complainant has not complained to the agency concerned; and
- the Commissioner considers the complainant should do so in an attempt to directly resolve the complaint.

Clause 82 re-enacts sections 72, 72A, and 72B of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides for the Commissioner to refer a complaint to an Ombudsman, the Health and Disability Commissioner, the Inspector-General of Intelligence and Security, or the Independent Police Conduct Authority. The Commissioner may only make a referral if the complaint relates to a matter more properly within the jurisdiction of one of those people.

Clause 83 re-enacts section 72C of the Privacy Act 1993 and enables the Commissioner to refer a complaint to an overseas privacy enforcement authority if the complaint relates to a matter that is more properly within the jurisdiction of that authority.

Clause 84 re-enacts sections 74 and 77(2)(c) of the Privacy Act 1993 and enables the Commissioner, before investigating a complaint, to explore the possibility of settlement. If appropriate, the Commissioner may also endeavour to secure a satisfactory assurance from the agency whose action is the subject of the complaint that there will not be a repetition of that action.

Subpart 2—Investigations by Commissioner

Clause 85 provides that subpart 2 of Part 5 applies to investigations conducted by the Commissioner—

• on complaints; or
• on his or her own initiative, in relation to any matter in respect of which a complaint may be made.

Clause 86 re-enacts section 73 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that, as the first step of an investigation, the Commissioner must notify the aggrieved individual and the respondent that an investigation is being commenced.

Clause 87 re-enacts section 74 and 77(1) and (2) of the Privacy Act 1993 and enables the Commissioner, at any time during an investigation, to explore the possibility of securing a settlement and a satisfactory assurance.

Clause 88 re-enacts sections 71(2), 75, 90(1) and (2) of the Privacy Act 1993, drawing together the provisions relating to the procedure for conducting an investigation.

Clause 89 re-enacts section 90(3) of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that when conducting an investigation the Commissioner may regulate his or her own procedure.

Clause 90 re-enacts section 76 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that at any time during an investigation the Commissioner may call a conference of the parties to identify the matters in issue and to try to obtain a resolution of those issues.

Clause 91 re-enacts section 91 of the Privacy Act 1993 and gives the Commissioner power to summon and examine on oath any person who the Commissioner thinks has information relevant to the investigation.

Clause 92 re-enacts sections 92 and 93 of the Privacy Act 1993 and gives the Commissioner power to require any person to provide any information, documents, or things in that person’s possession or under that person’s control the Commissioner considers may be relevant to an investigation. The Commissioner will be able to specify any date by which the person must comply, otherwise the default period of 20 working days applies. Any extension of the time limit is at the discretion of the Commissioner, not at the discretion of the agency as currently.
Clause 93 re-enacts section 95 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that the Commissioner may exercise his or her powers in clauses 91 and 92 in respect of a person even though compliance by that person would breach an obligation of secrecy or non-disclosure.

Clause 94 re-enacts section 94 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides for the protection and privileges of persons required to give evidence or provide information, documents, or things to the Commissioner.

Clause 95 re-enacts section 96 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that any information, document, or thing provided to the Commissioner is privileged.

Clause 96 details the procedure to be followed after the Commissioner has completed an investigation of an action under subpart 1 of Part 4 (access to personal information) that appears to be an interference with the privacy of an individual. As an alternative to referring a complaint or matter to the Director, the Commissioner may now direct an agency to confirm whether it holds any specified information, or to permit the complainant access to specified information, or to make specified information available to the complainant in a particular way.

Clause 97 re-enacts section 75 and 78 of the Privacy Act 1993 and details the procedure to be followed after the Commissioner has completed an investigation of an action of an agency under subpart 3 of Part 4 (charges relating to access or correction requests) that appears to be an interference with the privacy of an individual. There is no change to the current procedure that enables the Commissioner to make a determination as to the appropriate charge which is final and binding on both parties.

Clause 98 re-enacts section 61 of the Privacy Act 1993 and details the procedure to be followed after the Commissioner has completed an investigation of a public register complaint.

Clause 99 re-enacts sections 75 and 77(1) and (2) of the Privacy Act 1993 and sets out the procedure to be followed after the Commissioner has completed any other investigation.

Clause 100 re-enacts section 81 of the Privacy Act 1993 and sets out the special procedure to be followed after completing an investigation relating to the action of an intelligence and security agency.

Clause 101 re-enacts section 80 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that the Commissioner may report any significant breach of duty or misconduct on the part of an agency to an appropriate authority.

Subpart 3—Proceedings before Human Rights Review Tribunal

Proceedings in relation to complaints or investigations

Clause 102 re-enacts section 82 of the Privacy Act 1993 and affords to the Director of Human Rights Proceedings a discretion to commence proceedings in the Human Rights Review Tribunal in respect of a complaint or matter referred to him or her by the Commissioner.
Clause 103 re-enacts section 83 of the Privacy Act 1993 and sets out the circumstances in which an aggrieved individual may commence proceedings in the Tribunal in respect of a complaint or matter. These circumstances now include—

- if the Commissioner determines that a complaint has substance, or that a matter should be proceeded with, but does not refer the complaint or matter to the Director;
- if the Commissioner makes a direction that an agency provide access to personal information, but the aggrieved individual is not satisfied with the terms of that direction.

The time frames for commencing a proceeding are specified.

Clause 104 re-enacts section 86 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that the Director may appear and be heard in any proceedings commenced in the Tribunal by an aggrieved individual under clause 103.

Clause 105 is a new provision and provides that an apology given by an agency is not admissible as evidence in any civil proceedings against the agency under Part 5, except for the purpose of assessing remedies to be awarded against the agency.

Clause 106 re-enacts section 87 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that the defendant has the onus of proving that an action is excepted or exempted from being an interference with the privacy of an individual.

Clause 107 re-enacts section 85(1) and (4) of the Privacy Act 1993 and sets out the remedies that the Tribunal may grant if it finds, on the balance of probabilities, that an action is an interference with the privacy of an individual.

Clause 108 re-enacts section 88 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that the Tribunal may award damages for an interference with the privacy of an individual in respect of—

- pecuniary loss:
- loss of any benefit:
- humiliation, loss of dignity, and injury to feelings.

Access orders

Clause 109 is a new provision that enables an aggrieved individual to apply to the Tribunal for an access order requiring an agency to comply with a direction made by the Commissioner under clause 96(5)(a).

Appeals against direction made after investigation of IPP 6 breach

Clause 110 is a new provision that enables an agency to appeal to the Tribunal against a direction made by the Commissioner under clause 96(5)(a).

Clause 111 provides that an appeal under clause 110 must be lodged within 20 working days of receiving notice of the Commissioner’s direction.

Clause 112 allows the chairperson of the Tribunal to make an interim suspending a direction made by the Commissioner under clause 96(5)(a) while an appeal is heard.
The chairperson must be satisfied that suspending the direction is necessary and in the interests of justice. A party can apply to the High Court to vary or rescind an interim order, unless the order was made with that party’s consent. An application to the High Court can be made only with the leave of the Tribunal. If an application is made, a party cannot also appeal the interim order.

Clause 113 provides that the Tribunal may determine an appeal on the papers if it considers it appropriate, but before doing so the Tribunal must give the parties a reasonable opportunity to comment on whether the proceeding should be dealt with in that manner.

Clause 114 sets out the powers of the Tribunal on hearing an appeal. The Tribunal may require the Commissioner to provide either or both of the following:

• a written report setting out the considerations the Commissioner had regard to in making the direction:
• any information held by the Commissioner required to determine the appeal.

The Tribunal may confirm, modify, or reverse the direction appealed against, and may also award damages.

Miscellaneous

Clause 115 re-enacts section 85(2) and (3), and 86(4) of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that the Tribunal may award costs against either party.

Clause 116 re-enacts section 89 of the Privacy Act 1993 and applies relevant provisions of the Human Rights Act 1993 to proceedings of the Tribunal.

Part 6
Notifiable privacy breaches and compliance notices

Subpart 1—Notifiable privacy breaches

Clause 117 sets out definitions for 3 terms used in subpart 1 of Part 6. Those terms are affected individual, notifiable privacy breach, and privacy breach. Clause 117 also states that the meanings of access, disclosure, and loss are not limited by the use of those words or the meanings ascribed to them elsewhere in the Act.

Clause 118 requires an agency to notify the Commissioner if the agency suffers a notifiable privacy breach as soon as practicable after becoming aware of it.

Clause 119 requires an agency to notify any affected individual if the agency suffers a notifiable privacy breach as soon as practicable after becoming aware of it. If it is not reasonably practicable to notify an affected individual or each member of a group of affected individuals, the agency must instead give public notice of the privacy breach. Exceptions to both these requirements are set out in clause 120. If subclause (2) or an exception in clause 120 is relied on, the agency must at a later time notify an affected individual, if circumstances change so that subclause (2) or the exception no longer applies and if, at that later time, there is or remains a risk that the breach will cause harm to an individual. Harm is defined by reference to clause 75(2)(b). A failure to notify an affected individual may be an interference with privacy under clause 75(2)(a)(iv).

Clause 120 sets out 6 exceptions to the requirement to notify affected individuals or give public notice of a notifiable privacy breach. 3 of these exceptions come from section 6(a), (c), and (d) of the Official Information Act 1982. The other 2 exceptions apply to 2 categories of vulnerable persons. These are individuals aged under 16 years, if notification is contrary to the interests of the individual and any individual, if notification is likely to prejudice the physical or mental health of that individual. In both cases the agency must consider whether to instead notify a representative of the individual. Representative is defined as a parent or guardian (for individuals aged under 16 years) or an individual appearing to be lawfully acting on behalf of the affected individual or in his or her interests (for individuals aged 16 years or over).
The agency must notify the Commissioner as soon as practicable if the agency relies on any of the exceptions and also if the agency cannot, or decides not to, notify a representative.

Clause 121 sets out the types of information that must be included in notifications to the Commissioner or affected persons. A notification to an affected individual must not include information about other affected individuals. The information can be provided incrementally.

Clause 122 creates an offence if an agency, without reasonable excuse, fails to notify the Commissioner of a notifiable privacy breach. The penalty is a fine not exceeding $10,000. It is not a defence that the agency did not consider the privacy breach to be a notifiable privacy breach, when it was reasonable to have done so, or that the agency has taken steps to address the privacy breach.

Clause 123 allows the Commissioner to publish the identity of an agency that has notified him or her of a notifiable privacy breach if the agency consents or if the Commissioner is satisfied that it is the public interest to do so.

Subpart 2—Compliance notices

Clause 124 allows the Commissioner to issue a compliance notice to an agency if he or she considers that 1 or both of the things listed in the clause may have occurred.
These are—

• a breach of the Act, including an action listed in clause 75(2)(a) (which lists actions that may be an interference with privacy, for example, a breach of an IPP) or non-compliance with a PRPP;

• an action that is to be treated as a breach of an IPP or an interference with the privacy of an individual under another Act.

The Commissioner may, but is not required to, first make an assessment of whether any person has suffered harm or use any other means under any Act for dealing with the breach. The Commissioner may issue a compliance notice at any time, including at the same time that the breach is being dealt with in another way.
Clause 125 sets out factors the Commissioner must consider before issuing a compliance notice. Each of the factors needs to be considered only to the extent that the Commissioner considers it is relevant and information about the factor is readily available to the Commissioner. Before a compliance notice can be issued, the agency concerned must be given a reasonable opportunity to comment on a written notice—

- describing the breach, citing the relevant statutory provision or provisions:
- summarising the Commissioner’s conclusions about the factors he or she has considered:
- describing any particular steps the Commissioner proposes to require the agency to take to remedy the breach (if any):
- describing any conditions the Commissioner proposes to impose (if any):
- stating the date or dates by which the Commissioner proposes the agency must remedy the breach and report to him or her (if any).

In each case, the Commissioner must determine what is a reasonable period to give the agency to comment, taking into account the circumstances of the breach.

The term breach is defined as meaning any of the things described in clause 124(1)(a) and (b). The term remedy the breach is defined as meaning to comply with the relevant statutory provision or provisions.

Clause 126 sets out requirements for the form and service of a compliance notice.

Clause 127 requires an agency served with a compliance notice to take steps to comply with the notice as soon as practicable after receiving the notice and to remedy the breach by the date stated in the notice. The agency need not do so if that date is varied or modified, or the notice is cancelled or suspended, under subpart 2 of Part 6.

Clause 128 allows the Commissioner to vary or cancel all or part of a compliance notice in 3 specified circumstances.

Clause 129 gives the Commissioner a power to obtain information, including a power to summons a person, as if the Commissioner were carrying out an investigation under Part 5.

Clause 130 allows the Commissioner to take enforcement proceedings in the Human Rights Review Tribunal. The Commissioner must have reason to believe that the agency has not remedied or will not remedy the breach by the date stated in the compliance notice, or has failed to report to the Commissioner by the date stated in the notice, and the time for an appeal against the notice has passed. An agency may object to enforcement only on the ground that it believes the notice has been fully complied with.

The Tribunal must not examine or make any determination about the issuing or merits of a compliance notice but may examine and determine whether it has been fully complied with.

Clause 131 allows an agency to appeal to the Tribunal against all or part of a compliance notice or a decision by the Commissioner under clause 128 to vary, not vary, or not cancel a compliance notice. Clause 131 also sets out the powers of the Tribunal on appeal and specifies 2 reasons for which a compliance notice cannot be cancelled or modified by the Tribunal. These are—

- the breach was unintentional or without negligence on the part of the agency:
- the agency has taken steps to remedy the breach, unless there is no further reasonable step that can be taken.

Clause 132 allows the Chairperson of the Tribunal to make an interim order suspending all or part of a compliance notice while an appeal is heard. The Chairperson must be satisfied that suspending the notice is necessary and in the interests of justice. A party can apply to the High Court to vary or rescind an interim order, unless the order was made with the party’s consent. An application to the High Court can be made only with the leave of the Tribunal. If an application is made, a party cannot also appeal the interim order.

Clause 133 sets out the remedies that may be given by the Tribunal in enforcement proceedings and on appeal against a compliance notice or a decision under clause 128. An agency that, without reasonable excuse, fails to comply with certain orders of the Tribunal commits an offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding $10,000. Costs may be awarded by the Tribunal and enforced in the District Court.

Clause 135 allows the Commissioner to appear in proceedings under subpart 2 of Part 6 either in person or represented by counsel or an agent.

Part 7

Sharing, accessing, and matching personal information

Subpart 1—Information sharing

Clauses 136 to 161 re-enact Part 9A and Schedule 2A of the Privacy Act 1993 (that authorise information sharing in accordance with an approved information sharing agreement to facilitate the provision of public services) with the following substantive changes:

- a new term, specified organisation, is introduced, which means any of a number of specified Crown agencies (statutory entities named in Part 1 of Schedule 1 of the Crown Entities Act 2004) (clause 138):
- the current requirement that 1 of the parties to an agreement must be a department, or part of a department, is changed so that a specified organisation, or part of a specified organisation, may be a requisite party (clause 141):
• the concept of representative party has been removed and replaced by a provision that enables an agreement to apply to a class of agencies, and for any member of that class to subsequently become a party to the agreement by being named as a party in a schedule to the agreement (clause 142):

• a specified organisation will be able to be designated as the lead agency for an agreement (clause 143):

• parties proposing to enter into an information sharing agreement that specifies a class of agencies to which the agreement may apply must consult and invite submissions on the proposed agreement from any person or organisation representing that class (clause 150).

Subpart 2—Identity information
Clauses 162 to 168 re-enact Part 10A and Schedule 4A of the Privacy Act 1993 (which authorise specified agencies, when carrying out particular functions, to access information held by other specified agencies to verify the identity of individuals) without change.

Subpart 3—Law enforcement information
Clauses 169 to 173 re-enact Part 11 and Schedule 5 of the Privacy Act 1993 (which authorise specified public sector agencies to have access to law enforcement information held by other specified agencies about identifiable individuals) with the following substantive changes:

• clause 172 clarifies that access to court information under new Schedule 5 afforded by this provision prevails over section 237 (and Schedule 1) of the District Court Act 2016 and section 174 (and Schedule 2) of the Senior Courts Act 2016. This means that public sector agencies can access court information under subpart 3 of Part 7 without having an approved information sharing agreement in place, as required by the latter provisions:

• clause 173 provides that Schedule 5 (other than law enforcement information described in that schedule as court records) may be amended or replaced by Order in Council on the recommendation of the Minister of Justice after consultation with the Commissioner.

Subpart 4—Authorised information matching programmes
Clauses 174 to 191 re-enact Part 10 and Schedules 3 and 4 of the Privacy Act 1993 (which authorise agencies to compare personal information in accordance with an authorised information matching programme). However, subpart 4 of Part 7 will apply to only the authorised information matching programmes currently in existence. New information matching programmes cannot be entered into under subpart 4 of Part 7. This is implemented by—

• inserting a new application provision (clause 175):
• carrying over into the Bill the information matching provisions listed in Schedule 3 of the Privacy Act 1993, except those provisions that currently have no agreements sitting under them (Schedule 6):

• providing that Schedule 6 (Information matching provisions) may be amended by Order in Council on the recommendation of the Minister of Justice by updating or repealing any information matching provision or repealing Schedule 6 in its entirety:

• inserting a schedule that consequentially amends other enactments to provide that existing information matching agreements can continue, but no new information matching agreement can be entered into under an information matching provision (Schedule 8).

The following substantive changes are also made:

• the definition of adverse action is amended to include, as examples, decisions to impose a penalty and to recover a penalty or fine:

• carrying over into the Bill the information matching rules set out in Schedule 4 of the Privacy Act 1993, except clauses 3 and 8 (relating to on-line transfers and time limits) (Schedule 7):

• section 98 of the Privacy Act 1993 (information matching guidelines) has not been carried over:

• section 101 of the Privacy Act 1993 is now incorporated in clause 5 of the information matching rules set out in Schedule 7.

Part 8
Transfer of personal information outside New Zealand

Clauses 192 to 200 re-enact, without change, Part 11A of the Privacy Act 1993.

Part 9
Miscellaneous provisions

Clause 201 re-enacts section 23 of the Privacy Act 1993 and requires an agency to appoint at least 1 privacy officer.

Clause 202 re-enacts section 22 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that the Commissioner may require an agency to supply information needed to respond to inquiries from the public.

Clause 203 provides that when conducting an inquiry under clause 14(1)(i) the Commissioner has the same powers as when conducting an investigation under Part 5.

Clause 204 re-enacts section 20 of the Privacy Act 1993 and relates to the obtaining of declaratory judgments.

Clause 205 re-enacts section 115 of the Privacy Act 1993 and protects agencies from legal liability where personal information is made available in good faith under IPP 6.
Clause 206 re-enacts section 116 of the Privacy Act 1993 and requires the Commissioner and his or her staff to maintain secrecy.

Clause 207 is a new provision and enables the Commissioner to share information with overseas privacy enforcement authorities subject to any conditions the Commissioner considers appropriate.

Clause 208 re-enacts sections 117, 117A, and 117B of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides for the Commissioner to consult the Ombudsman, the Health and Disability Commissioner, and the Inspector-General of Intelligence and Security about any matter relating to his or her functions.

Clause 209 re-enacts section 119 of the Privacy Act 1993 and prevents claims of public interest immunity, in order to exclude evidence, in the course of investigations by the Commissioner, proceedings before the Commissioner or the Tribunal, or in judicial review proceedings.

Clause 210 re-enacts section 120 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides that the Commissioner must not, in any report or statement, make any comment that is adverse to any person unless that person has been given the opportunity to be heard.

Clause 211 re-enacts section 126 of the Privacy Act 1993 and deals with liability of employers and principals.

Clause 212 re-enacts section 127 of the Privacy Act 1993 and is an offence provision. There are 2 new offences relating to impersonation and the destruction of documents. The penalty for all offences in this clause is, on conviction, a fine not exceeding $10,000 (up from $2,000 in the case of existing offences).

Clause 213 re-enacts section 128 of the Privacy Act 1993 and provides for the making of regulations. A new provision is inserted to provide for the making of regulations specifying the information to be included in a compliance notice.

Clause 214 repeals the Privacy Act 1993 and revokes the Privacy Regulations 1993.

Cause 215 consequentially amends the enactments specified in Schedule 10.

Clause 216 provides that clause 215 and Schedule 10 expire on 1 January 2020 and at the close of that date are repealed.

Part 3

Information privacy principles, public register privacy principles and codes of practice

Subpart 1—Information privacy principles

19 Information privacy principles

The information privacy principles are as follows:
Information privacy principle 1

Purpose of collection of personal information

Personal information must not be collected by an agency unless—

(a) the information is collected for a lawful purpose connected with a function or an activity of the agency; and

(b) the collection of the information is necessary for that purpose.

Information privacy principle 2

Source of personal information

(1) If an agency collects personal information, the information must be collected from the individual concerned.

(2) It is not necessary for an agency to comply with subclause (1) if the agency believes, on reasonable grounds,—

(a) that non-compliance would not prejudice the interests of the individual concerned; or

(b) that compliance would prejudice the purposes of the collection; or

(c) that the individual concerned authorises collection of the information from someone else; or

(d) that the information is publicly available information; or

(e) that non-compliance is necessary—

(i) to avoid prejudice to the maintenance of the law by any public sector agency, including prejudice to the prevention, detection, investigation, prosecution, and punishment of offences; or

(ii) for the enforcement of a law that imposes a pecuniary penalty; or

(iii) for the protection of public revenue; or

(iv) for the conduct of proceedings before any court or tribunal (being proceedings that have been commenced or are reasonably in contemplation); or

(v) to prevent or lessen a serious threat to the life or health of the individual concerned or any other individual; or

(f) that compliance is not reasonably practicable in the circumstances of the particular case; or

(g) that the information—

(i) will not be used in a form in which the individual concerned is identified; or
(ii) will be used for statistical or research purposes and will not be published in a form that could reasonably be expected to identify the individual concerned.

Information privacy principle 3

Collection of information from subject

(1) If an agency collects personal information from the individual concerned, the agency must take any steps that are, in the circumstances, reasonable to ensure that the individual concerned is aware of—

(a) the fact that the information is being collected; and

(b) the purpose for which the information is being collected; and

(c) the intended recipients of the information; and

(d) the name and address of—

   (i) the agency that is collecting the information; and

   (ii) the agency that will hold the information; and

(e) if the collection of the information is authorised or required by or under law,—

   (i) the particular law by or under which the collection of the information is authorised or required; and

   (ii) whether the supply of the information by that individual is voluntary or mandatory; and

(f) the consequences (if any) for that individual if all or any part of the requested information is not provided; and

(g) the rights of access to, and correction of, personal information provided by the IPPs.

(2) The steps referred to in subclause (1) must be taken before the information is collected or, if that is not practicable, as soon as practicable after the information is collected.

(3) An agency is not required to take the steps referred to in subclause (1) in relation to the collection of information from an individual if the agency has taken those steps on a recent previous occasion in relation to the collection, from that individual, of the same information or information of the same kind.

(4) It is not necessary for an agency to comply with subclause (1) if the agency believes, on reasonable grounds,—

(a) that non-compliance would not prejudice the interests of the individual concerned; or

(b) that non-compliance is necessary—

   (i) to avoid prejudice to the maintenance of the law by any public sector agency, including prejudice to the prevention, detection, investigation, prosecution, and punishment of offences; or
(ii) for the enforcement of a law that imposes a pecuniary penalty; or
(iii) for the protection of public revenue; or
(iv) for the conduct of proceedings before any court or tribunal (being proceedings that have been commenced or are reasonably in contemplation); or
(c) that compliance would prejudice the purposes of the collection; or
(d) that compliance is not reasonably practicable in the circumstances of the particular case; or
(e) that the information—
   (i) will not be used in a form in which the individual concerned is identified; or
   (ii) will be used for statistical or research purposes and will not be published in a form that could reasonably be expected to identify the individual concerned.

Information privacy principle 4

Manner of collection of personal information
An agency may collect personal information only—
(a) by a lawful means; and
(b) by a means that, in the circumstances of the case (having regard particularly to the age of the individual concerned),—
   (i) is fair; and
   (ii) does not intrude to an unreasonable extent upon the personal affairs of the individual concerned.

Information privacy principle 5

Storage and security of personal information
An agency that holds personal information must ensure—
(a) that the information is protected, by such security safeguards as it is reasonable in the circumstances to take, against—
   (i) loss; and
   (ii) access, use, modification, or disclosure that is not authorised by the agency; and
   (iii) other misuse; and
(b) that, if it is necessary for the information to be given to a person in connection with the provision of a service to the agency, everything reasonably within the power of the agency is done to prevent unauthorised use or unauthorised disclosure of the information.

Information privacy principle 6
Access to personal information
(1) If an agency holds personal information, an individual is entitled to receive from the agency—
(a) confirmation of whether the agency holds any personal information about him or her:
(b) access to his or her personal information.
(2) If an individual concerned is given access to personal information, the individual must be advised that, under IPP 7, the individual may request the correction of that information.
(3) This principle is subject to the provisions of Part 4.

Information privacy principle 7
Correction of personal information
(1) If an agency holds personal information,—
(a) an individual concerned is entitled to request the agency to correct the information:
(b) the agency, on its own initiative, may correct the information.
(2) At the time of making a request under subclause (1)(a), or at any later time, the individual concerned is entitled to—
(a) provide to the agency a statement of the correction sought to the information; and
(b) request the agency to attach the statement to the information if the agency is not willing to make the correction sought.
(3) If an agency corrects personal information or attaches a statement of correction to personal information, that agency must, so far as is reasonably practicable, inform every other agency to whom the agency has disclosed the personal information.
(4) Subclauses (1) and (2) are subject to the provisions of Part 4.

Information privacy principle 8
Accuracy, etc, of personal information to be checked before use or disclosure
An agency that holds personal information must not use or disclose that information without taking any steps that are, in the circumstances, reasonable to ensure that the information is accurate, up to date, complete, relevant, and not misleading.
Information privacy principle 9

Agency not to keep personal information for longer than necessary

An agency that holds personal information must not keep that information for longer than is required for the purposes for which the information may lawfully be used.

Information privacy principle 10

Limits on use of personal information

(1) An agency that holds personal information that was obtained in connection with one purpose may not use the information for any other purpose unless the agency believes, on reasonable grounds,—

(a) that the purpose for which the information is used is directly related to the purpose in connection with which the information was obtained; or

(b) that the information—

(i) is used in a form in which the individual concerned is not identified; or

(ii) is used for statistical or research purposes and will not be published in a form that could reasonably be expected to identify the individual concerned; or

(c) that the use of the information for that other purpose is authorised by the individual concerned; or

(d) that the source of the information is a publicly available publication and that, in the circumstances of the case, it would not be unfair or unreasonable to use the information; or

(e) that the use of the information for that other purpose is necessary—

(i) to avoid prejudice to the maintenance of the law by any public sector agency, including prejudice to the prevention, detection, investigation, prosecution, and punishment of offences; or

(ii) for the enforcement of a law that imposes a pecuniary penalty; or

(iii) for the protection of public revenue; or

(iv) for the conduct of proceedings before any court or tribunal (being proceedings that have been commenced or are reasonably in contemplation); or

(f) that the use of the information for that other purpose is necessary to prevent or lessen a serious threat to—

(i) public health or public safety; or
(ii) the life or health of the individual concerned or another individual.

(2) In addition to the uses authorised by subclause (1), an intelligence and security agency that holds personal information that was obtained in connection with one purpose may use the information for any other purpose (a secondary purpose) if the agency believes on reasonable grounds that the use of the information for the secondary purpose is necessary to enable the agency to perform any of its functions.

Information privacy principle 11

Limits on disclosure of personal information

(1) An agency that holds personal information must not disclose the information to any other agency or to any person unless the agency believes, on reasonable grounds,—

(a) that the disclosure of the information is one of the purposes in connection with which the information was obtained or is directly related to the purposes in connection with which the information was obtained; or

(b) that the disclosure is to the individual concerned; or

(c) that the disclosure is authorised by the individual concerned; or

(d) that the source of the information is a publicly available publication and that, in the circumstances of the case, it would not be unfair or unreasonable to disclose the information; or

(e) that the disclosure of the information is necessary—

(i) to avoid prejudice to the maintenance of the law by any public sector agency, including prejudice to the prevention, detection, investigation, prosecution, and punishment of offences; or

(ii) for the enforcement of a law that imposes a pecuniary penalty; or

(iii) for the protection of public revenue; or

(iv) for the conduct of proceedings before any court or tribunal (being proceedings that have been commenced or are reasonably in contemplation); or

(f) that the disclosure of the information is necessary to prevent or lessen a serious threat to—

(i) public health or public safety; or

(ii) the life or health of the individual concerned or another individual; or

(g) that the disclosure of the information is necessary to enable an intelligence and security agency to perform any of its functions; or that the information—

(i) is to be used in a form in which the individual concerned is not identified; or

(ii) is to be used for statistical or research purposes and will not be published in a form that could reasonably be expected to identify the individual concerned; or

(i) that the disclosure of the information is necessary to facilitate the sale or other disposition of a business as a going concern.

(2) Without limiting the generality of subclause (1)(e)(i), an example of disclosure under that subclause is reporting to the New Zealand Police a reasonably held belief that an offence has been, or may be, committed.

(3) An agency (A) may not disclose personal information to an overseas person (B) in reliance on subclause (1)(a), (c), (e), (f), (h), or (i) unless—

(a) section 8 applies to A and B; or

(b) the individual concerned authorises the disclosure of the information to B; or

(c) B is in a prescribed country or State; or

(d) A believes on reasonable grounds that B is required to protect the information in a way that, overall, provides comparable safeguards to those in this Act.

(4) However, subclause (3) does not apply if the personal information is to be disclosed to an overseas person in reliance on subclause (1)(e) or (f) and it is not reasonably practicable in the circumstances for A to comply with the requirements of subclause (3).

(5) Without limiting the generality of subclause (3)(d), an example of A having the necessary belief on reasonable grounds is A having entered into an agreement with B that provides comparable safeguards to those in this Act.

(6) In this principle,— overseas person means a person outside New Zealand who is not subject to this Act prescribed country or State means a country or State that is specified in regulations as having privacy laws comparable to those of New Zealand.

Information privacy principle 12

Unique identifiers

(1) An agency (Agency A) may assign a unique identifier to an individual for use in its operations only if that identifier is necessary to enable Agency A to carry out 1 or more of its functions efficiently.
(2) Agency A may not assign to an individual a unique identifier that, to Agency A's knowledge, is the same unique identifier as has been assigned to that individual by another agency (Agency B), unless—
   (a) Agency A and Agency B are associated persons within the meaning of subpart YB of the Income Tax Act 2007; or
   (b) the unique identifier is to be used by Agency A for statistical or research purposes and no other purpose.

(3) To avoid doubt, Agency A does not assign a unique identifier to an individual under subsection (1) by simply recording a unique identifier assigned to the individual by Agency B for the sole purpose of communicating with Agency B about the individual.

(4) Agency A must take all reasonable steps to ensure that a unique identifier is assigned only to an individual whose identity is clearly established.

(5) Before disclosing a unique identifier to another agency, Agency A must take all reasonable steps to minimise the risk of misuse of the unique identifier by that other agency or any other person.

(6) An agency may not require an individual to disclose any unique identifier assigned to that individual unless the disclosure is for one of the purposes in connection with which that unique identifier was assigned or is for a purpose that is directly related to one of those purposes.

20 Application of IPPs to personal information held overseas

(2) For the purposes of IPPs 6 and 7, personal information held by an agency includes personal information held outside New Zealand by that agency.

(3) Nothing in this section applies to render an agency in breach of any of the IPPs in respect of any action that the agency is required to take by or under the law of any place outside New Zealand.

Compare: 1993 No 28 s 60(1)

(1) Nothing in IPP 6 or 11 derogates from—
(a) a provision contained in any enactment that authorises or requires personal information to be made available; or

(b) a provision contained in any other Act that—
   (i) imposes a prohibition or restriction in relation to the availability of personal information; or
   (ii) regulates the manner in which personal information may be obtained or made available.

(2) An action is not in breach of IPPs 1 to 5, 7 to 10, or 12 if the action is authorised or required by or under law.

(2) IPP 12(1) to (4) apply only to the assignment of unique identifiers after 2 July 1993.

(3) IPP 12(2) applies to the assignment of a unique identifier after 2 July 1993 where the assignment is in respect of a unique identifier that is the same as that assigned by another agency before or after that date.

Compare: 1993 No 28 s 8(1), (5)

24 Exemption for personal information relating to personal or domestic affairs

   (a) is an individual; and
   (b) is collecting personal information solely for the purposes of, or in connection with, his or her personal or domestic affairs.

(2) IPPs 5 to 11 do not apply to an agency if that agency—
   (a) is an individual; and
   (b) is holding personal information that was collected by a lawful means solely for the purposes of, or in connection with, his or her personal or domestic affairs.

(3) However, the exemptions in subsections (1) and (2) do not apply if—
   (a) the personal information is, or was, collected by engaging in misleading or deceptive conduct, or conduct likely to mislead or deceive; or
   (b) the collection, use, or disclosure of the personal information would be highly offensive to a reasonable person.

(a) personal information during transmission by post or electronic means; or

(6) The Commissioner may grant an authorisation sought by an applicant only if the Commissioner is satisfied that, in the special circumstances of the case,—

(a) the public interest in granting the authorisation outweighs, to a substantial degree, the possibility of—

(i) any loss, detriment, damage, or injury to the individuals concerned; or

(ii) any adverse affect on the rights, benefits, privileges, obligations, or interests of the individuals concerned; or

(iii) any significant humiliation, significant loss of dignity, or significant injury to the feelings of the individuals concerned; or

(iii) any significant humiliation, significant loss of dignity, or significant injury to the feelings of the individuals concerned.

(2) Every code of practice, and every amendment or revocation of a code of practice, issued in accordance with this section—breach of any PRPP, is, for the purposes of Part 5, treated as breaching an PRPP.

(4) If a code of practice issued under section 36 modifies an IPP and is in force, failure to comply with the code, even if the failure would not otherwise be a sonal information about a requestor; or

(b) a request made under IPP 6(1)(b) to access personal information held by an agency about the requestor; or who makes the request.

45 Individuals may make access request
An access request may be made only by a requestor who is an individual.

Compare: 1993 No 28 s 34

46 Urgency

cess request).
(2) A requestor making an urgent access request must state why the request should be treated as urgent.
(3) On receiving an urgent access request, an agency must consider the request and the reason stated for its urgency when determining the priority to be given to responding to it.

Compare: 1993 No 28 s 37

47 Assistance
Every agency must give reasonable assistance to an individual who—
(a) wishes to make an access request; or
(b) is making an access request.

Compare: 1993 No 28 s 38
48 Transfer of access request

(1) This section applies if an agency that receives an access request—
   (a) does not hold the information to which the request relates, but believes that the information is held by another agency; or
   (b) believes that the request is more closely connected with the functions or activities of another agency.

(2) The agency must promptly, and in any case not later than 10 working days after the day on which the access request is received, transfer the request to the other agency and inform the requestor accordingly.

(3) However, subsection (2) does not apply if the agency has good cause to believe that the requestor does not want the request transferred to another agency.

(4) If, in reliance on subsection (3), the agency does not transfer the request, the agency must promptly, and in any case not later than 10 working days after the day on which the access request was received, inform the requestor that—
   (a) this section applies in respect of the request; and
   (b) in reliance on subsection (3), the request has not been transferred; and
   (c) the name of the agency to which the request could be transferred.

Compare: 1993 No 28 s 39

49 Decision on access request under IPP 6(1)(a)

(1) On receiving an access request made under IPP 6(1)(a) that is not transferred under section 48, an agency must, as soon as is reasonably practicable, and in any case not later than 20 working days after the day on which the request is received, give or send to the requestor a response to the request.

(2) A response must—
   (a) confirm that the agency holds personal information about the requestor; or
   (b) confirm that the agency does not hold personal information about the requestor; or
   (c) state that the agency neither confirms nor denies that it holds personal information about the requestor.

(3) A response under subsection (2)(c) may be given only if,—
   (a) had the request been made under IPP 6(1)(b), the agency would have relied on section 52(1)(a)(i) or (d), 54, 55, or 57(b) to refuse to disclose information, or refuse to disclose information if it existed; and

(b) by any other means agreed by the parties.

(2) The objectives of a conference are—
(a) to identify the matters in issue between the parties; and
(b) to try to obtain agreement between the parties on the resolution of those matters in order to settle the complaint.

(3) If a person fails to comply with a request under subsection (1) to attend a conference, the Commissioner may issue a summons requiring the person to attend a conference at a time and place specified in the summons.

(iii) the Human Rights Review Tribunal, if the Commissioner is required to provide a report or information under section 114(1).

(b) in proceedings commenced in any court relating to the proceedings commenced in the Tribunal.

(2) If the Director appears in any proceedings,—

(a) the Director has the same rights as the parties to the proceedings to—

(i) call evidence on any matter; and
(ii) examine, cross-examine, and re-examine witnesses; and

(b) the Tribunal or court may order—

(i) any party to pay the costs incurred by the Director by reason of the Director’s appearance; or

(ii) the Director to pay the costs incurred by any or all of the parties by reason of his or her appearance.

(3) If the Director declines to appear and be heard in any proceedings,—

(a) the Commissioner may instead appear and be heard in the proceedings; and

(b) subsection (2) applies to the Commissioner in the same way as it applies to the Director.

105 Apology not admissible except for assessment of remedies

(1) If an apology is given by an agency in connection with an action alleged to be an interference with the privacy of an individual, it is not admissible as evidence in any civil proceedings against the agency under this Part except as provided in subsection (2).

(2) An agency may bring evidence of the apology for the purpose of the Tribunal assessing remedies to be awarded against the agency.

106 Onus of proof

Where any provision of this Act, or any code of practice issued under section 35 or 36, excepts or exempts any action from being an interference with the privacy of an individual, the defendant has the onus of proving that exception or exemption in any proceedings under this Part.

Compare: 1993 No 28 s 87

107 Remedies in respect of interference with privacy

(1) This section applies if proceedings are commenced in the Tribunal in respect of an action that is alleged to be an interference with the privacy of an individual.

(2) If, in the proceedings, the Tribunal is satisfied on the balance of probabilities that any action of the defendant is an interference with the privacy of an individual, the Tribunal may grant 1 or more of the following remedies:

(a) a declaration that the action of the defendant is an interference with the privacy of an individual:
an order restraining the defendant from continuing or repeating the interference, or from engaging in, or causing or permitting others to engage in, conduct of the same kind as that constituting the interference, or conduct of any similar kind specified in the order:

damages in accordance with section 108:

an order that the defendant perform any acts specified in the order with a view to remedying the interference, or redressing any loss or damage suffered by the aggrieved individual as a result of the interference, or both:

any other relief that the Tribunal thinks fit.

It is not a defence to proceedings that the interference was unintentional or without negligence on the part of the defendant, but the Tribunal must take the conduct of the defendant into account in deciding what, if any, remedy to grant.

In any proceedings, the Tribunal may award damages against the defendant for an interference with the privacy of an individual in respect of 1 or more of the following:

pecuniary loss suffered as a result of, and expenses reasonably incurred by the aggrieved individual for the purpose of the transaction or activity out of which the interference arose:

loss of any benefit, whether or not of a monetary kind, that the aggrieved individual might reasonably have been expected to obtain but for the interference:

humiliation, loss of dignity, and injury to the feelings of the aggrieved individual.

Subsection (1) is subject to subpart 1 of Part 2 of the Prisoners’ and Victims’ Claims Act 2005.

The Director must pay damages recovered under this section to the aggrieved individual on whose behalf the proceedings were brought.

Subsection (3) is subject to subsections (5) to (7).

If the aggrieved individual is a minor who is not married or not in a civil union, the Director may, in his or her discretion, pay the damages to Public Trust or to any person or trustee corporation acting as the manager of any property of the aggrieved individual.

If the aggrieved individual is a mentally disordered person within the meaning of section 2 of the Mental Health (Compulsory Assessment and Treatment) Act 1992 whose property is not being managed under the Protection of Personal and Property Rights Act 1988, the Director may, in his or her discretion, pay the damages to Public Trust.
If the aggrieved individual is a person whose property is being managed under the Protection of Personal and Property Rights Act 1988, the Director must ascertain whether the terms of the property order cover management of money received as damages and,—

(a) if damages fall within the terms of the property order, the Director must pay the damages to the person or trustee corporation acting as the property manager; or

(b) if damages do not fall within the terms of the property order, the Director may, in his or her discretion, pay the damages to Public Trust.

If money is paid to Public Trust under subsection (5), (6), or (7),—

(a) sections 103 to 110 of the Contract and Commercial Law Act 2017 apply in the case of a minor who is not married or not in a civil union; and

(b) sections 108D, 108F, and 108G of the Protection of Personal and Property Rights Act 1988 apply, with any necessary modifications, in the case of a person referred to in subsection (6) or (7)(b); and

(c) section 108E of the Protection of Personal and Property Rights Act 1988 applies, with any necessary modifications, in the case of an individual referred to in subsection (7)(a).

(1) An agency that has received notice of a direction made by the Commissioner under section 96(5)(a) after the completion of an investigation may appeal to the Tribunal against the direction.

(2) The parties to the appeal are the parties to the investigation.

111 Time for lodging appeal

(1) An appeal under section 110 must be lodged with the Tribunal within 20 working days from the date of the notice given to the parties to the complaint under section 96(8) (the appeal period).

(2) The Tribunal may accept an appeal lodged not later than 3 months after the appeal period if the Tribunal is satisfied that exceptional circumstances prevented the appeal from being lodged within the appeal period.

112 Interim order suspending Commissioner’s direction pending appeal

(1) The chairperson of the Tribunal may make an interim order suspending a direction made by the Commissioner under section 96(5)(a) until an appeal is determined if the chairperson is satisfied that it is necessary and in the interests of justice to make the order.

(2) If an interim order is made, a party may apply to the High Court to vary or rescind the order, unless the order was made with that party’s consent.

(3) An application under subsection (2) may be made only with the leave of the Tribunal.

(4) An application may be made instead of but not as well as an appeal against the interim order under section 123(1) of the Human Rights Act 1993.

113 Appeal may be determined on papers

(1) The Tribunal may determine an appeal on the papers if the Tribunal considers it appropriate.

(2) Before doing so, the Tribunal must give the parties a reasonable opportunity to comment on whether the proceeding should be dealt with in that manner.

114 Determination of appeal

(1) The Tribunal may require the Commissioner to provide either or both of the following:

   (a) a written report setting out the considerations to which the Commissioner had regard in making the direction:

   (b) any information held by the Commissioner that is required to determine the appeal.
At the hearing of an appeal (other than an appeal determined on the papers), the Commissioner is entitled to appear in person, or by his or her representative, and be heard.

The Tribunal may determine an appeal by—
(a) confirming the direction appealed against:
(b) modifying the direction appealed against:
(c) reversing the direction appealed against.

The Tribunal may award damages in accordance with section 108.

Miscellaneous

Costs

In any proceedings under section 102, 103, 109, or 110, the Tribunal may award costs against either party whether or not it makes any other order.

If, in any proceedings before the Tribunal or a court, costs are ordered to be paid by the Director, those costs must be paid by the Commissioner.

The Commissioner is not entitled to be indemnified by the aggrieved individual in respect of any costs the Commissioner is required to pay under subsection (1).

An agency must notify the Commissioner as soon as practicable after becoming aware that a notifiable privacy breach has occurred.

119 Agency to notify affected individual or give public notice of notifiable privacy breach

(1) An agency must notify an affected individual as soon as practicable after becoming aware that a notifiable privacy breach has occurred, unless subsection (2) or an exception in section 120 applies.

(2) If it is not reasonably practicable to notify an affected individual or each member of a group of affected individuals, the agency must instead give public notice of the privacy breach.

(3) Public notice must be given—

(a) in a form in which no affected individual is identified; and

(b) in accordance with any regulations made under section 213.
If subsection (2) or an exception in section 120 is relied on, the agency must notify the affected individual or individuals at a later time if—

(a) circumstances change so that subsection (2) or the exception no longer applies; and

(b) at that later time, there is or remains a risk that the privacy breach will cause any of the types of harm listed in section 75(2)(b) to the affected individual or individuals.

A failure to notify an affected individual under this section may be an interference with privacy under this Act (see section 75(2)(a)(iv)).

120 Exceptions to obligations to notify affected individual or give public notice of notifiable privacy breach

(1) An agency is not required to notify an affected individual or give public notice of a notifiable privacy breach if the notification or notice would be likely to—

(c) endanger the safety of any person; or

(d) reveal a trade secret.

(2) An agency is not required to notify an affected individual or give public notice of a notifiable privacy breach—

(a) if the individual is under the age of 16 and the agency is satisfied that the notification or notice would be contrary to that individual’s interests; or

(b) if, after consultation is undertaken by the agency with the individual’s health practitioner (where practicable), the agency is satisfied that the notification or notice would be likely to prejudice the physical or mental health of the individual.

(3) If an agency decides not to notify an affected individual for either of those reasons, the agency must—

(a) consider whether it would be appropriate to notify a representative instead of the individual (if a representative is known or can be readily identified); and

(b) before deciding whether to notify a representative, take into account the circumstances of both the individual and the privacy breach; and

(c) if the agency decides it is appropriate to notify a representative and has identified a representative, notify that person.

(4) The agency must advise the Commissioner as soon as practicable if—
(a) the agency relies on subsection (1) and does not notify an affected individual or give public notice of the breach; or

(b) the agency—

   (i) relies on subsection (2) and does not notify an affected individual or give public notice of the breach; and

   (ii) cannot or decides not to notify a representative of that individual.

   (b) explain the steps that the agency has taken or intends to take in response to the privacy breach, including whether any affected individual has been or will be contacted; and

e) state that the individual has the right to make a complaint to the Commissioner; and

f) give details of a contact person within the agency for inquiries.

4) In order to comply with the requirement under sections 118 and 119 that notification must be made as soon as practicable, an agency may provide the information required by this section incrementally. However, any information that is available at any point in time must be provided as soon as practicable after that point in time.

122 Offence to fail to notify Commissioner

1) An agency that, without reasonable excuse, fails to notify the Commissioner of a notifiable privacy breach under section 118 commits an offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding $10,000.

2) It is not a defence to a charge under this section that the agency—

(a) did not consider the privacy breach to be a notifiable privacy breach, if, in the circumstances, it was reasonable for the agency to have done so; or

(b) has taken steps to address the privacy breach.

123 Publication of identity of agencies in certain circumstances

1) The Commissioner may publish the identity of an agency that has notified the Commissioner of a notifiable privacy breach if—

(a) the agency consents to publication; or

(b) the Commissioner is satisfied that it is in the public interest to do so.

2) This section does not prevent the publication of details of any notifiable privacy breach in a form in which the agency or any affected individual is not identified and for the purpose of informing the public about the extent and nature of privacy breaches.
Subpart 2—Compliance notices

124 Compliance notices

(1) The Commissioner may issue a compliance notice to an agency if he or she considers that 1 or both of the following may have occurred:

(a) a breach of this Act, including an action listed in section 75(2)(a) or non-compliance with a PRPP;

(c) describes particular steps that the Commissioner considers need to be taken to remedy the breach (if any) and any conditions he or she considers appropriate (if any); and
(d) states the date or dates by which the Commissioner proposes that the agency must remedy the breach and report to the Commissioner (if any).

(4) In each case, the Commissioner must determine the period of time that will give the agency a reasonable opportunity to comment, taking into account the circumstances of the case.

(5) For the purpose of this subpart,—

137  Relationship between subpart 1 and other law relating to information disclosure

(1) To avoid doubt, nothing in this subpart—

(a) limits the collection, use, or disclosure of personal information that is authorised or required by or under any enactment; or

(b) compels agencies to enter into an information sharing agreement if those agencies are already allowed to share personal information—

(i) by or under any other enactment; or

(ii) because an exemption from or a modification to 1 or more of the IPPs or any code of practice is not required to make the sharing of the information lawful.

(2) Without limiting subsection (1)(a),—

(a) this subpart does not limit section 22, 25, or 27; and

(b) this subpart and subparts 2 to 4 do not limit one another.

(3) An information sharing agreement may—

(a) duplicate an information sharing provision by providing for an agency to share the same personal information specified in the information sharing provision—

(i) with the same agencies specified in the information sharing provision; and
(ii) for the same purposes specified in the information sharing provision; or

(b) extend an information sharing provision that is not a restricted information sharing provision by providing for an agency to share the same personal information specified in the information sharing provision—

(i) with the same agencies specified in the information sharing provision for a purpose not specified in the information sharing provision; or

(ii) with an agency not specified in the information sharing provision for a purpose specified in the information sharing provision; or

(i) the restricted information sharing provision is an information matching provision (as defined in section 178); or

(ii) there is express statutory authorisation to do so.

(4) In subsection (3),—

information sharing provision means a provision in any enactment other than this Act that authorises or requires the sharing of personal information by an agency with 1 or more other agencies for 1 or more specified purposes restricted information sharing provision means an information sharing provision that expressly restricts the purposes for which the personal information may be shared to those purposes specified.

(1) The Commissioner may prohibit a transfer of personal information from New Zealand to another State if the Commissioner is satisfied, on reasonable grounds, that—
   (a) the information has been, or will be, received in New Zealand from another State and is likely to be transferred to a third State where it will not be subject to a law providing comparable safeguards to those in this Act; and
   (b) the transfer would be likely to lead to a contravention of the basic principles of national application set out in Part Two of the OECD Guidelines and in Schedule 9 of this Act.

(2) In determining whether to prohibit a transfer of personal information, the Commissioner must also consider, in addition to the matters set out in subsection (1) and section 18, the following:

(2) An agency on whom a transfer prohibition notice has been served may, at any time after the end of the period during which an appeal under section 198(1)(a) can be lodged, apply in writing to the Commissioner for the notice to be varied or cancelled under subsection (1).

Schedule 7

Information matching rules

ss 177, 178, 189

1 Notice to individuals affected

(1) Agencies involved in an authorised information matching programme must take all reasonable steps (which may consist of or include public notification) to ensure that the individuals who will be affected by the programme are notified of the programme.

(2) Nothing in subclause (1) requires an agency to notify any individual about an authorised information matching programme if to do so would be likely to frustrate the objective of the programme.

2 Use of unique identifiers

Except as provided in any other enactment, unique identifiers may not be used as part of any authorised information matching programme unless their use is essential to the success of the programme.

3 Technical standards

(1) The agency primarily responsible for the operation of an authorised information matching programme must establish and maintain detailed technical standards to govern the operation of the programme.

(2) The technical standards established by an agency in accordance with subclause (1) must deal with the following matters:

(a) the integrity of the information to be matched, with particular reference to—
    (i) key terms and their definition; and
    (ii) relevance, timeliness, and completeness:

(b) the matching techniques to be used in the programme, with particular reference to—
    (i) the matching algorithm:
    (ii) any use of unique identifiers:
    (iii) the nature of the matters being sought to be identified by the matching process:
    (iv) the relevant information definitions:
    (v) the procedure for recognising matches:

(c) the controls being used to ensure the continued integrity of the programme, including the procedures that have been established to confirm the validity of matching results:
the security features included within the programme to minimise and audit access to personal information, including the means by which the information is to be transferred between agencies.

(3) The technical standards established in accordance with subclause (1) must be incorporated in a written document (in this clause, a Technical Standards Report), and copies of the Technical Standards Report must be held by all agencies that are involved in the authorised information matching programme.

(4) Variations may be made to a Technical Standards Report by way of a Variation Report appended to the original report.

(5) The agency that prepares a Technical Standards Report must forward a copy of that report, and of every Variation Report appended to that report, to the Commissioner.

(6) The Commissioner may at any time direct that a Technical Standards Report be varied, and that direction must be complied with by the agency that prepared the report.

(7) Every agency involved in an authorised information matching programme must comply with the requirements of the associated Technical Standards Report (including any variations made to the report).

4 Safeguards for individuals affected by results of programmes

(1) The agencies involved in an authorised information matching programme must establish reasonable procedures for confirming the validity of discrepancies before an agency seeks to rely on them as a basis for action in respect of an individual.

(2) Subclause (1) does not apply if the agencies concerned consider that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the results are not likely to be in error, and in forming that view the agencies must have regard to the consistency in content and context of the information being matched.

(3) Where those confirmation procedures do not take the form of checking the results against the source information, but instead involve direct communication with the individual affected, the agency that seeks to rely on the discrepancy as a basis for action in respect of an individual must notify the individual affected that no check has been made against the information which formed the basis for the information supplied for the programme.

(4) Every notification in accordance with subclause (3) must include an explanation of the procedures that are involved in the examination of a discrepancy revealed by the programme.

5 Destruction of information

(1) In this clause, information matching information means—

(a) information disclosed to an agency under an information matching provision for use in an authorised information matching programme; and
(b) information that is produced from an authorised information matching programme.

(2) Information matching information held by an agency that does not reveal a discrepancy must be destroyed as soon as practicable by the agency.

(3) An agency that holds information matching information that reveals a discrepancy must destroy that information within 60 working days after becoming aware of the discrepancy unless the agency decides to take adverse action against any individual on the basis of that discrepancy.

(4) An agency that decides to take adverse action against any individual on the basis of a discrepancy must destroy the information as soon as practicable after the information is no longer required.

(5) This clause does not apply in relation to the Inland Revenue Department.

6 No new databank

(1) Subject to subclauses (2) and (3), the agencies involved in an authorised information matching programme must not permit the information used in the programme to be linked or merged in such a way that a new separate permanent register or databank of information is created about all or any of the individuals whose information has been subject to the programme.

(2) Subclause (1) does not prevent an agency from maintaining a register of individuals in respect of whom further inquiries are warranted following a discrepancy revealed by the programme, but information relating to an individual may be maintained on a register of that kind only for so long as is necessary to enable those inquiries to be carried out, and in no case longer than is necessary to enable any adverse action to be taken against an individual.

(3) Subclause (1) does not prevent an agency from maintaining a register for the purpose of excluding individuals from being selected for investigation, but that register may only contain the minimum amount of information necessary for that purpose.
